

EQUALLYWELL 2022 Symposium

Bursary Application

With the support of our generous sponsors, we are able to assist people with lived experience of mental illness (as a consumer or carer) to attend the Equally Well 2022 Symposium. This assistance will cover travel, accommodation and meal expenses.

To ensure a fair and equal application process, bursary applicants are requested to make an application in line with the eligibility criteria below:

1. Have a lived experience as a consumer and/or carer.
2. Have financial constraints that prevent you attending symposium without a bursary.
3. Aged 18 years or older.
4. An Australian resident.

Applications are open to people with lived experience from interstate and within Queensland.

Consistent with current public health orders in Qld and conference venue requirements, applicants must be fully vaccinated against COVID-19.

When is my application due?

Bursary applications close 10 pm (your local time) Sunday, 20 March 2022. Equally Well will notify you of the outcome by Tuesday, 22 March 2022.

What does a bursary cover?

As registration to the event is free bursaries may contribute to the cost of flights and/or ground transport and accommodation. The event will have no or limited catering so the bursary will also include a daily allowance for meals.

Bursaries do not cover personal expenses such as costs photocopying, IT etc.

If you require special services to manage disability or accessibility, please advise us in your application.

What does the application involve?

The application includes questions to gain understanding as to why you want to attend the symposium and why you are requesting support. Some questions help us ensure the fair distribution of bursaries across different sectors and groups. However, it is important that you should only share information that you are comfortable sharing.

To apply, please complete the questions on the next page and submit the application by email to enquiries@equallywell.org.au.
